July 2009 Awards Update

President's Note

Congratulations to All the Honorees

I hope everyone had a great time Emmy night! It was an amazing evening recognizing extraordinary work. Your work.

I wanted to congratulate all the nominees and recipients. And I wanted to thank a fantastic crew, led by director Steve Wilson and producer Chris Cashman.

And then there's our host, Pat Cashman! Incredible. Again.

I'm pretty sure Pat was born to host the Northwest Emmys. We've been so lucky to have Pat as our host over the years.

And then there's the Silver Circle. With the induction of Greg Palmer and Tracy Barry — details are on Page 2 —

John Sharify
President
NATAS Northwest

there's no doubt about the level of talent in Northwest broadcasting. You can see it for yourselves.

I hope by now everyone's taken a look at the new NATAS Northwest Web site, natasnw.org. For the first time in our chapter's history, we are now providing all winning segments (I'm not supposed to use the word "winner") in their entirety online — not just the 30-second clips we saw Emmy night, but every second of that 60-minute documentary or that 5-minute investigative report.

It is an honor to be working in this market, and it has been my honor to lead the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Northwest.

I have one more year as president. My goodness — the three years have flown by.

Drop us a line if you have thoughts about how we might improve the Emmy show. We'd love to hear from you. You can reach us at president@natasnw.org.

I hope everyone has a great summer, and make sure you enjoy the Seattle sunshine before it disappears on us.

See you soon, I hope.

2009 Silver Circle Inductees

NATAS Northwest honored two outstanding journalists with induction into its Silver Circle at the annual Northwest Regional Emmy Awards ceremony on May 30.

The Silver Circle recognizes television professionals who have made distinguished contributions to television for 25 years or more, the significant portion of which was done in the Northwest region.

This year's honorees are:

Greg Palmer

As a reporter, writer or producer, Greg Palmer produced outstanding work in television that has left a legacy few others have achieved.

For 13 years, Palmer worked at KING-TV as the arts & entertainment editor and a news commentator. He also produced compelling programs like "Death: A Trip of a Lifetime" and "The Falcon." Palmer won numerous awards for his work, including several regional Emmy awards and a Peabody Award.

Tracy Barry

Tracy Barry, news anchor at KGW-TV in Portland, Ore., is one of the most recognized and respected journalists in the Northwest.

Before arriving at KGW in 1985, Barry, an alumna of Washington State University, worked for KATU in Portland, KSTW in Tacoma/Seattle, KTVB in Boise, Idaho, and KPVI in Pocatello, Idaho. A native of the Northwest, Barry grew up in Gig Harbor, Wash. She is active in the community and focuses her energy on fundraising for children's charities.

2009 Scholarship Winners

This year's winners of $2,500 scholarships from NATAS Northwest are Andriana Fletcher, a junior at Pacific Lutheran University, and Ashley Korslien, a senior at the University of Montana.

Andriana Fletcher, a communications major and religion minor, has been a fixture at the student television station since she first set foot on the PLU campus. She became news producer last year. "Every week I organize student reporters, write the news readers, make news packages, teach students how to edit and I direct the show," she said in her personal statement for the scholarship. The PLU student station won second place for its student newscast from the Society of Professional Journalists Mark of Excellence Awards this year. Her professor at PLU said, "If I were hiring from among our pool of students, Andriana would be the first student I would hire."

Ashley Korslein is majoring in broadcast journalism with a minor in political science at UM. "An up and coming superstar," according to her adviser, Denise Dowling, an associate professor at UM. "Her writing hits home and her production skills are exemplary." Korslein hopes to some day become an investigative reporter. "Sure, the pay isn't great and the hours are long," she said in her personal statement. "But there is no greater satisfaction than doing something you love and making a difference."

Fletcher and Korslein join more than 70 other college students who have received scholarships from NATAS Northwest. NATAS Northwest has contributed nearly $100,000 to assist Northwest college students in their quest for careers in the television industry since it awarded its first scholarship in 1985.
